

Translated from Russian.

Today the issues of migration as well as their impact on both countries of origin and destination have recently become quite relevant, which indicates the need to improve the regulation of migration. Migration flows have increased in all regions of the world, with particularly high rates in Asia.

At the end of 2019, the number of labor resources of Uzbekistan was 18.9 million and demonstrated 1% growth compared to 2018. The number of the economically active population grew by 181,500, or 1.2% compared to 2018. The annual population growth is about 1.8% and according to expert forecasts, by 2025 the population of the country will be over 36 million people. In this situation, labor migration is a necessity to enable employment of jobless citizens of Uzbekistan.

Given that the provisions of the Global Compact are focused on involving all government agencies in designing an effective system of support for migrant workers and members of their families; the provision of comprehensive care by the state for their daily needs and aspirations; strengthening reliable social and legal safeguards both on the territory of the country and abroad, based on the Decree No.UP-5785 on Measures to further strengthen guarantees for the protection of citizens of Uzbekistan engaged in temporary labor activity abroad, and their family members of the President of Uzbekistan issued on 08/20/2019, the Department for the Protection of the Rights of Citizens of Uzbekistan, involved in temporary labor activity abroad, and international economic cooperation, was created in the structure of the Cabinet of Ministers of Uzbekistan.

training, adaptation measures, employment of migrant workers abroad, provision of legal and social assistance, including after repatriation;

monitoring of processes related to temporary labor activities of citizens of Uzbekistan abroad, including information on the passage of vocational training, retraining and advanced training, measures of financial support received, legal and social assistance provided, as well as employment contracts made with foreign employers.

Policy and Enabling Environment

Labor migration is a large-scale and multifaceted process that is closely linked with the development of the labor market and employment of the population.

In this regard, the adopted Strategy of Actions in five priority areas of development of Uzbekistan in 2017-2021, approved by the Decree No. UP-4947 of the President of Uzbekistan dated February 7, 2017, marked a qualitatively new approach to the system of strategic planning of the prospects of governance and social development of the country.

One of the avenues of this Strategy is the development of the social sector through consistent increase in employment and real incomes of the population through implementation of targeted programs

Analysis of the past years has shown that the main reasons for unorganized migration are: a) inadequate legal framework for regulating external labor migration; b) the absence of intergovernmental agreements regarding the protection of the rights and interests of migrant workers; c) monopoly in the market of employment of citizens abroad; d) the absence of reintegration programs for migrant workers who have returned from abroad.

3. Progress towards GCM goals (2000 words suggested)

Currently, the number of employed persons is 13.6 million, of which 5.6 million are in the formal sector and 7.9 million are in the informal sector. It is worth noting that employment in the informal sector is declining and shifting to the formal sector. Thus, for the first time since independence, there is a high growth in employment in the official sector, which topped 300,000 this year.

Nevertheless, the demographic situation does not enable coping with the sheer number of young labor force in the labor market. Every year, 600,000-700,000 young persons enter the labor market, demanding the creation of sustainable jobs with decent wages.

In a rapidly changing globalized economy, where education systems are constantly evolving, the skills and training of migrants must be adapted to the demand of employers in destination markets. Improving access to training and certification relevant for specific employers and assignments, will provide an opportunity to address the skills mismatch problem for young migrants in destination countries.

Policymakers and training providers should facilitate this through collaboration with the governments of destination/host countries.

Likewise, highly skilled migrants are barred from accessing employment opportunities that match their skills in destination markets due to different certification schemes.

Introduction of transnational certification standards that enable migrants to validate their education or training and then obtain jobs that match their qualifications, skills and productivity.

In order to change the current situation in the area of external labor migration, expand the geography of employment abroad, as well as to enhance the benchmarks for protection of the rights and freedoms of migrant workers, the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations of Uzbekistan, in accordance with its mandate, has identified following main prospective avenues of activities:

1. Measures to streamline the labor migration market, enhance the safeguards of the rights and freedoms of migrant workers, eliminate the state monopoly on the employment of citizens abroad, create and develop private sector for the provision of services related to employment;

2. Establishing close cooperation and promoting new labor-related initiatives with the Russian Federation, Kazakhstan, the Republic of Korea, Japan, Turkey and the countries of the European Union;

3. Efforts to improve the professional qualifications of the labor force, the opening of vocational training centers, the search for new forms of improving the skills and qualifications of the working-age population, especially young people.

5. Next Steps (500 words suggested)

1. Discussion of the prospects of transferring the IOM sub-regional office for Central Asia to Uzbekistan (Tashkent).

Today, the number of citizens of Uzbekistan engaged in labor activities abroad is more than 2 million people. In addition, 600,000-700,000 young people enter the labor market annually, for whom the creation of sustainable jobs is required.

One of the solutions in this situation is the development of organized labor migration.

Also, most convenient geographical location of Uzbekistan in Central Asia and the possibility of locating the IOM Sub-regional office in Central Asia in Tashkent should be taken into account, as it will enable Uzbekistan, as the country with the largest population in the region, to conduct closer cooperation with the IOM as well as with other countries of the region.

2. Inviting the General Director of IOM - A. Vitorino to Uzbekistan, in the framework of the inauguration of the IOM Representative Office in Uzbekistan (Tashkent) and the planned high-level international conference on labor migration, including the issues of improving the activities of private employment agencies with possible technical and expert support from the IOM.

3. Work on pre-departure training for migrant workers.

The Ministry is implementing large-scale activities to create a network of training and adaptation centers for Uzbek citizens in the territory of Uzbekistan to acquire on-demand professions and pre-departure (language, historical and cultural heritage of the country, etc.) training for temporary work abroad.

Taking into account the growing demand for labor in Eastern European countries, it is essential to consider with IOM the prospects of joint creation of Adaptation and vocational training courses in different areas with the subsequent issuance of certificates valid in the EU and in Eastern Europe.
