Introduction

Introduction

This booklet has been developed to support planning for implementation of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) and complements the process outlined in “Implementing the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration: Guidance for governments and all relevant stakeholders”. While the guide establishes a suggested process to support GCM implementation, this booklet provides an in-depth look at each of the 23 objectives of the GCM. This booklet articulates the associated actions, practical examples of implementation, and relevant Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) for each of the GCM objectives. It aims to inform and inspire GCM implementation efforts and provides governments and other stakeholders with a complementary resource to support in developing context-specific, relevant, GCM implementation plans.

The following sections have been included in this booklet to inform and inspire implementation planning.

The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM)

A summary of the vision and guiding principles provides some foundational understandings about the GCM.

International Frameworks Underpinning the GCM

A comprehensive list of the international frameworks that underpin the GCM, including human rights laws and standards and other international conventions, which lays out the international rules and standards to which GCM implementation should adhere.

23 GCM Objectives and Associated Actions

All 23 objectives and actions of the GCM have been included for reference. Each objective of the GCM contains a commitment, followed by a range of actions considered to be relevant policy instruments and best practices. For each objective, the following are also included:

Example practices

The example practices provide a preliminary snapshot that highlights positive elements of specific responses, but does not assess each practice comprehensively. As such, the inclusion of examples does not signify that all elements of the response or practice in a particular country or region are consistent with the GCM guiding principles and objectives. The example practices aim to demonstrate how GCM implementation is happening at multiple levels around the world in real time. They are to be viewed as promising practices and as efforts upon which a State’s own future actions might build or improve. The examples provided are not an exhaustive nor prescriptive list.

Additional examples are available through the Repository of Practices of the Migration Network Hub (<https://migrationnetwork.un.org/hub/repository-of-practices>). The repository showcases replicable practices and serves as an inspiration for actors involved in GCM implementation at the global, national, regional and local levels. While most of the examples are of State-led actions, some refer to actions carried out by non-governmental actors, such as civil society organizations. All implementing entities are invited to contribute to this collection of practices.

Relevant Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) of particular relevance have been listed for each GCM objective. The GCM is anchored in the SDGs, which were adopted three years prior to the GCM. Many SDG-related actions already underway are likely contributing to GCM implementation. Similarly, GCM implementation presents a significant opportunity to leverage the positive impact of migration for sustainable development. Beyond implementation processes, the respective review, monitoring and reporting processes for the GCM and SDGs - namely, the elaboration of voluntary National Action/Implementation Plans, as well as reviews to inform Regional Reviews and the International Migration Review Forum (IMRF) for the GCM and the Voluntary National Reviews (VNRs) and Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs) for the High-Level Political Forum (HLPF) for the SDGs - should feed into and support each other.

Resources

Key resources to guide the GCM implementation process are linked in this section, for example the GCM, Sustainable Development Goals, key international frameworks and the Migration Network Hub.

Migration Network Hub

Following the adoption of the GCM, the United Nations Network on Migration established a capacity-building mechanism consisting of a connection hub interlinked with a knowledge platform - the Migration Network Hub - and a start-up fund (Migration Multi-Partner Trust Fund). The Hub is a virtual meeting space where governments, stakeholders and experts can access and share migration-related information and services. It provides curated content, analysis and information on a variety of topics. The Hub aims to support UN Member States in the implementation, follow-up and review of the Global Compact for Migration by serving as a repository of existing evidence, practices and initiatives, and facilitating access to knowledge sharing via online discussions, an expert database and tailor-made solutions.

The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM)

The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) was adopted by United Nations Member States on 10 December 2018 and endorsed by the UN General Assembly on 19 December 2018. Prepared under the auspices of the United Nations, it is the first inter-governmentally negotiated agreement to cover all dimensions of international migration. In adopting the GCM, Member States committed to fulfilling its objectives and commitments at the national, regional and global levels in a way that takes into account different national realities, capacities and levels of development.

The GCM is a non-legally binding, cooperative framework based on the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, all core international human rights treaties, international labour standards and relevant existing international law. It builds on the commitments agreed by Member States in the New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants (2016) and in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. It reaffirms the sovereign right of States to determine their own national migration policy, as well as their prerogative to govern migration within their jurisdiction, in conformity with international law (GCM, para. 15). The GCM expresses a collective commitment to improving cooperation on international migration, recognizing the key contribution of migration to the human experience throughout history, and that migration is a source of prosperity, innovation and sustainable development, which can be optimized by improving migration governance. The GCM sets out a common understanding, shared responsibilities and unity of purpose regarding migration.

In adopting the GCM, Member States committed to fulfilling the objectives and commitments it outlined. In particular, they committed to taking effective steps to implement the GCM at the national, regional and global levels, in a way that is not only aligned with the GCM’s vision and guiding principles, but which takes into account different national realities, capacities and levels of development and which respects obligations under international law (GCM, para. 41).

Guiding Principles of the GCM

The GCM is based on a set of cross-cutting and interdependent guiding principles. These principles must be applied together and underpin all GCM implementation efforts.

23 Objectives: a 360-Degree Vision of International Migration

In line with a 360-degree view of migration, the GCM’s objectives illustrate a comprehensive, multidimensional approach to improving migration governance, and each of the 23 GCM objectives is part of a balanced, holistic approach to migration governance. Beyond considering migration in all its stages - origin, transit, destination and return - the 23 GCM objectives aim to address the adverse drivers of migration; the migration journeys themselves; the arrival and reception of migrants; migrants’ opportunities for social and economic well-being in destination countries; and return, readmission and reintegration.

While different GCM objectives focus on various aspects of migration, from access to services for migrants to border governance and available migration pathways, taken together they represent a comprehensive 360-degree vision of migration. Accordingly, GCM objectives should not be considered in isolation but rather all 23 objectives should be implemented together. The 360-degree approach makes clear that focusing on combatting smuggling without also working on protection will not work; that focusing on remittances without delivering on decent work will not work; that focusing on pathways without attention to narratives and inclusion will not work; that no approach to migration governance will work if it does not seek to understand who is moving and why; and that without international cooperation, all efforts will be limited.

International Frameworks Underpinning the GCM

International Human Rights Law and Standards

The GCM rests on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and each of the nine core international human rights law treaties, which should be upheld throughout GCM implementation, follow-up and review. Further, human rights is one of the GCM's ten guiding principles, upholding the principles of non-regression and non-discrimination.

When governments commit to implementing the GCM, they therefore also commit to ensuring the effective respect, protection and fulfilment of the human rights of all migrants, regardless of their migration status, and during all stages of migration. As part of GCM implementation, governments are also called upon to eliminate all forms of discrimination against migrants and their families, including racism, xenophobia and intolerance (GCM, para. 15).

Human Rights Legal Instruments

1948 · Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR)

Adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 10 December 1948, the UDHR serves as a common standard of achievement for peoples and nations all over the globe. The UDHR asserts the “inherent dignity and the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family [which] is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world”. It further affirms that “All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights” (Article 1) and that “[e]veryone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration” (Article 2).

1965 · International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD)

Ratifying parties commit to eliminating racial discrimination, promoting understanding among races, criminalizing membership in racist organizations and outlawing hate speech.

1966 · International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR)

Parties of the ICCPR commit to respecting individuals' civil and political rights. These include the right to life and various freedoms (of assembly, speech and religion), the right to due process and a fair trial, and electoral rights.

1966 · International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR)

Parties to the ICESCR commit to work towards respecting individuals' economic, social and cultural rights. These include labour rights as well as the rights to health, education and an adequate standard of living, including food, housing and water and sanitation.

1979 · Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW)

The convention is both an international bill of rights for women, as well as an agenda for action, requiring all parties to implement “all appropriate measures, including legislation, to ensure the full development and advancement of women, for the purpose of guaranteeing them the exercise and enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms on a basis of equality with men” (Article 3).

● 1984 · Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (UNCAT)

The convention's objective is to prevent torture and other acts of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment around the globe. The convention commits parties to implement measures to prevent torture in territories under their jurisdiction, and forbids States from expelling, returning or extraditing a person to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be in danger of being subjected to torture.

● 1989 · Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC)

One hundred and ninety-six countries have signed the CRC, making it the most widely ratified human rights treaty in history. It lays out a framework for the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of children.

● 1990 · International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (ICRMW)

The ICRMW is the most comprehensive international treaty dealing with the rights of migrant workers and their families, migration regulation and interstate cooperation on migration. Article 7 calls for the protection of migrant workers and their families, regardless of "sex, race, colour, language, religion or conviction, political or other opinion, national, ethnic or social origin, nationality, age, economic position, property, marital status, birth, or other status."

● 2006 · International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance

The convention's objective is to prevent enforced disappearance and crimes against humanity. The convention requires its ratifying parties to undertake a number of actions, among them investigating acts of enforced disappearance; ensuring that enforced disappearance is considered an offense under criminal law; cooperating with other States to prosecute and extradite offenders; and ensuring that victims of enforced disappearance have the right to request compensation and reparation.

● 2006 · Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

The purpose of this Convention is to promote, protect and ensure the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by all persons with disabilities, and to promote respect for their inherent dignity.

Other International Conventions and Frameworks

United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (in force 2003), also known as the Palermo Convention and includes the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons Especially Women and Children, signifies commitment by Member States to preventing and combatting trafficking in persons, engaging in cross-border cooperation, and providing assistance to trafficking victims. The Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air (in force 2004) aims to protect the rights of migrants, while reducing the influence and power of organized criminal bodies engaged in the abuse of migrants.

Slavery Convention (in force 1927) and the Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery (in force 1957) aim to accelerate the abolition of slavery and the slave trade.

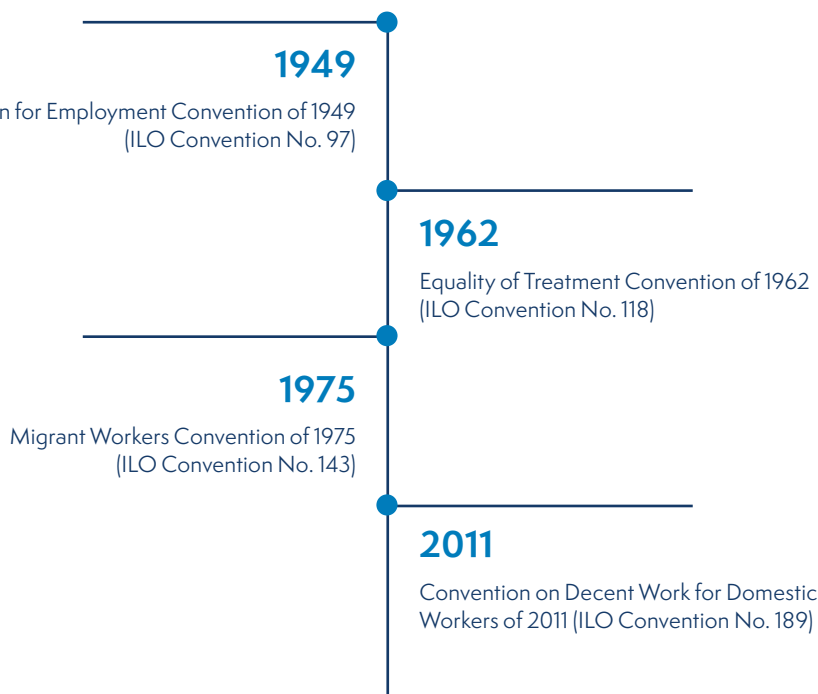

United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC)

The UNFCCC entered into force in 2004 and represents a framework for national governments around the world to cooperate with one another to limit average global temperature increases and to cope with the inevitable impacts of climate change. Subsequent agreements - including the Kyoto Protocol and the Paris Agreement - have stemmed from this. The Paris Agreement entered into force in 2016 and, building on the UNFCCC, gathers all nations around the common goal of undertaking ambitious actions to fight climate change and adapt to its consequences.

United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification

This Convention entered into force in 1996 and stemmed from a direct recommendation of the Rio Conference's Agenda 21. Its objective is to combat desertification and to mitigate the consequences of drought through the implementation of national interventions that integrate long-term strategies with a strong call for partnership, participation and decentralization.

2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development

This ambitious global framework was adopted by UN resolution in 2015 and came into effect on 1 January 2016. It outlines 17 Sustainable Development Goals with 169 associated targets that States commit to achieve to ensure sustainable development for all, with a focus on people, prosperity and planet. The 2030 Agenda recognizes migration as a core development consideration, and marks the first time migration is integrated explicitly into the global development agenda. The Agenda is relevant to all mobile populations regardless of whether internal or cross border, displaced or not: "goals and targets will be met for all nations and peoples and all segments of society." It recognizes migrant women, men and children as a vulnerable group to be protected, and as agents of development.

Addis Ababa Action Agenda

Adopted at the Third International Conference on Financing for Development, then subsequently endorsed by the UN General Assembly in July 2015, the Addis Ababa Action Agenda lays out an innovative framework for financing sustainable development through the alignment of financial flows and policies with social, economic and environmental priorities. Outlining a comprehensive series of policy actions - which touch on sources of finance, innovation, trade, data, debt and technology - the Action Agenda aims to accelerate the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration and the Global Compact for Refugees

The New York Declaration was adopted in 2016 by UN resolution at the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on addressing large movements of refugees and migrants (the UN Summit for Refugees and Migrants). It set out State commitments to fully protect the human rights of all refugees and migrants as rights-holders, regardless of their status, and to devise responses to large movements with full respect for international human rights law and other relevant standards, which were to be outlined in the development of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) and the Global Compact on Refugees. The Global Compact on Migration was subsequently adopted in 2018 as the first ever United Nations global agreement on a common approach to international migration in all its dimensions. The Global Compact for Refugees was adopted in 2018, acting as a framework for more predictable and equitable responsibility sharing, recognizing that a sustainable solution to refugee situations cannot be achieved without international cooperation. The GCM confirms that "[t]he two global compacts, together, present complementary international cooperation frameworks that fulfil their respective mandates as laid out in the New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, which recognizes that migrants and refugees may face many common challenges and similar vulnerabilities."

Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction (2015-2030)

Adopted at the Third UN World Conference on Disaster Risk Reduction in Sendai City in 2015, and subsequently endorsed by the UN General Assembly in June 2015, the Sendai Framework - acting hand in hand with the 2030 Agenda - presents a roadmap for enhancing the safety and resilience of our communities, including addressing disaster-induced human mobility. It is the first significant agreement of the post-2015 development agenda and lays out concrete steps for safeguarding development gains from the threat of disaster.

New Urban Agenda

Adopted at the United Nations Conference on Housing and Sustainable Urban Development in Quito on 20 October 2016, and subsequently endorsed by the UN General Assembly in December 2016, the New Urban Agenda presents a collective vision for an increasingly sustainable future. It highlights how urbanization - if well-managed and well-planned - can serve as a powerful instrument for sustainable development, in both the Global North and Global South.

○ Towards a global programme for migration data panel

In March 2019, the UN Statistics Division organized a high-level panel entitled “Towards a global programme for migration data.” Referring to GCM Objective 1, this panel brought together representatives of countries, the donor community, statistical institutes, the United Nations system and civil society to discuss the development and implementation of a global programme on international migration statistics, as well as to share experiences and present initiatives to improve the collection and use of migration data and indicators in the context of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the GCM (United Nations Statistical Commission, 2019).

○ International Data Alliance for Children on the Move

In March 2020, UNICEF, IOM, UNHCR and OECD launched the International Data Alliance for Children on the Move, which brings together experts from national statistical offices, migration-relevant line ministries, international and regional organizations, NGOs, academics and civil societies. The main objective of the Alliance is improving statistics and data on migrant and forcibly displaced children to support evidence-based policymaking that protects and empowers them (UNICEF, 2020a).

○ Free Movement and Migration (FMM) West Africa project

The FMM supports the development of standardized migration-relevant data and country-level migration profiles (either new ones or updates of existing ones) and regional migration profiles through technical assistance and capacity-building support to the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) Commission, which consists of fifteen ECOWAS Member States and Mauritania. FMM is funded by the European Union and the ECOWAS Commission and jointly implemented by IOM, the International Centre for Migration Policy Development (ICMPD) and ILO (Schachter, 2019).

○ Mediterranean City-to-City Migration project

Within the framework of the Mediterranean City-to-City Migration project, Amman, Beirut, Casablanca, Lisbon, Lyon, Madrid, Oujda, Rabat, Sfax, Sousse, Tangiers, Tunis, Turin and other cities in the Mediterranean have elaborated and shared city migration profiles with the support of a local expert and the involvement of different stakeholders engaged on migration and inclusion at the local level. These profiles collected existing data on migrant populations, as well as mapped out related actors and activities that could support local policy-making and strengthen multi-stakeholder cooperation (ICMPD, n.d.).

Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative

In March 2016, the OECD established the Champion Mayors for Inclusive Growth Initiative, which gathers mayors from across the world committed to addressing inequalities and taking action to generate more inclusive growth in their respective cities. This initiative has helped municipal governments to analyze growing inequalities, design policies aimed at equity and growth, and monitor the material living standards of their citizens. The initiative takes a multidimensional approach to examining inclusive growth, going beyond the metric of income to assess how people are faring, and looking as well as criteria such as health and jobs (OECD, n.d.).

The Prospects Partnership

The Prospects Partnership funded by The Netherlands and bringing together the World Bank Group - including the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation (IFC), UNICEF, UNHCR, and ILO - aims to shift the paradigm from a humanitarian to a development approach in responding to forced displacement crises, fostering an enabling environment for socio-economic inclusion; improving access to education and protection for vulnerable children on the move; and strengthening the resilience of host communities (Government of The Netherlands, n.d.).

National strategy on the management of disaster and climate induced internal displacement

In 2015, the government of Bangladesh published its National strategy on the management of disaster and climate induced internal displacement (NSMDCIID). The strategy was prepared with the aim of managing climate-induced internal displacement with an approach that is both comprehensive and rights-based. The national strategy formed a part of the Government's action plan to implement the Sendai Framework, and was in line with Bangladesh's Social Development Framework and other national and international policy frameworks. The strategy, which focuses on internal displacements (and not cross-border ones) induced by climate-related disasters, lays out a strategy that covers all three phases of displacements, including pre-displacement, the displacement phase and post-displacement (Siddiqui, 2015).

All SDGs

In order to eliminate the adverse drivers and structural factors that compel people to leave their country of origin, these factors must be comprehensively understood and addressed. The factors span the entirety of the 17 Sustainable Development Goals, including SDG 1 on poverty, SDG 2 on ending hunger and SDG 3 on ensuring healthy lives and promoting well-being for all. In addition, SDG 13 on combating climate change and SDG 16 on promoting peaceful and inclusive societies are critical to ensuring people are not compelled to leave their country of origin. Thus, there is a need to integrate migration considerations and the rights and needs of migrants across all development areas. Doing so will help achieve SDG 17.14: Enhance policy coherence for sustainable development.

Provide Accurate and Timely Information at All Stages of Migration

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Launch and publicize a centralized and publicly accessible national website to make information available on regular migration options, such as on country-specific immigration laws and policies, visa requirements, application formalities, fees and conversion criteria, employment permit requirements, professional qualification requirements, credential assessment and equivalences, training and study opportunities, and living costs and conditions, in order to inform the decisions of migrants
- b. Promote and improve systematic bilateral, regional and international cooperation and dialogue to exchange information on migration-related trends, including through joint databases, online platforms, international training centres and liaison networks, while upholding the right to privacy and protecting personal data
- c. Establish open and accessible information points along relevant migration routes that can refer migrants to child-sensitive and gender-responsive support and counselling, offer opportunities to communicate with consular representatives of the country of origin, and make available relevant information, including on human rights and fundamental freedoms, appropriate protection and assistance, options and pathways for regular migration, and possibilities for return, in a language the person concerned understands.
- d. Provide newly arrived migrants with targeted, gender-responsive, child-sensitive, accessible and comprehensive information and legal guidance on their rights and obligations, including on compliance with national and local laws, obtaining of work and resident permits, status adjustments, registration with authorities, access to justice to file complaints about rights violations, as well as on access to basic services
- e. Promote multilingual, gender-responsive and evidence-based information campaigns and organize awareness-raising events and pre-departure orientation trainings in countries of origin, in cooperation with local authorities, consular and diplomatic missions, the private sector, academia, migrant and diaspora organizations and civil society, in order to promote safe, orderly and regular migration, as well as to highlight the risks associated with irregular and unsafe migration

Canadian Orientation Abroad Programme

The Canada Orientation Abroad (COA) Programme is an overseas orientation initiative that provides potential migrants to Canada with accurate, relevant, consistent and time-sensitive information designed to help them make well-informed settlement decisions. COA is offered to those migrants who already have Canadian visas, as well as those seeking family reunification or job opportunities (IOM, 2018).

Comprehensive Information and Orientation Programme

The Comprehensive Information and Orientation Programme (CIOP), which is currently being implemented in the context of the Abu Dhabi Dialogue (ADD), helps manage and provide tailored pre-departure, pre-employment and post-arrival orientation for temporary contractual workers working in Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries. Receiving technical support from IOM, ADD Member States aim to adapt the CIOP to their respective country contexts. The CIOP will help strengthen the protection and integration of temporary contractual workers through various means, among them enhancing the transparency of information, protecting workers from risks of abuse and exploitation, assisting prospective workers in making informed decisions, reducing barriers in workplaces, and promoting the social integration of migrants (IOM, 2018).

Towards the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour (TECL) II Project

In Namibia, a number of emerging practices around raising awareness on child labour-related issues have emerged. For example, the support of the media, which can reach and influence both rural and urban populations, was engaged in raising awareness around child labour as part of the TECL II Project through stories, various programmes and interviews (ILO, 2012).

Child and Family Support Hubs (Blue Dots)

In 2016, as part of a joint endeavour to step up protection for the growing number of children and others with specific needs arriving in Europe, UNHCR and UNICEF set up special support centres for children and families along the most frequently used migration routes in Europe. Twenty Child and Family Support Hubs, known as “Blue Dots”, provided a safe space for children and their families, vital services, play, protection and counselling in a single location. The hubs support vulnerable families on the move, especially the many unaccompanied or separated children at risk of sickness, trauma, violence, exploitation and trafficking (UNHCR, 2016). This approach has been replicated in the situation response for Venezuelans. Similarly, in 2019 the Government of Niger and UNICEF established four One Stop Social Welfare Shops in the region of Agadez and rehabilitated a temporary transit centre for unaccompanied child migrants (UNHCR, 2018).

Identification Document of New York City (IDNYC)

The Identification Document of New York City (IDNYC) is an identification document card that is freely available to all residents of New York City, including undocumented migrants. The IDNYC allows for residents in New York City — including vulnerable groups such as undocumented migrants, the homeless and youth — to identify themselves to authorities and guarantees access to municipal services that can only be accessed by individuals with valid forms of identification. For example, using the IDNYC residents can access New York City's public libraries, health centres and educational providers and open a bank account. Launched by New York Mayor Bill de Blasio in January 2015, the IDNYC initiative was preceded by a commissioned study that mapped, compared and analyzed other similar municipal initiatives in the country, as well as by a consultation process with various advocacy groups, including migrant groups (IOM and JMDI, 2015).

Birth Registration Programming: Thailand's Civil Registration Act (2008)

In 2010, Thailand lifted its reservation to Article 7 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. As part of the country's new Civil Registration Act, the government committed to registering the birth of all children within its jurisdiction. Under the revised law, children born in Thailand are entitled to be registered at birth even when their parents are not Thai nationals. Birth registration does not confer nationality on refugee children, but by establishing a legal record of their parents and place of birth, a birth certificate can be used to prove the right to acquire nationality if a child returns to the parent's country of origin. The law came into effect in 2010 and in the years since, Thai civil registration authorities have worked with partners to address the backlog of registration for children born in refugee camps (UNHCR, 2013; UNICEF, 2013).

Mexico's matrícula consular

The matrícula consular, an ID card issued by the Mexican government to Mexican citizens abroad, helps Mexico locate its nationals in emergency situations and is available to all Mexican nationals living in the United States, including those who are undocumented. To obtain the matrícula consular, Mexican nationals must pay a fee, provide their biometric information, and present various items, including an official Mexican ID, a Mexican birth certificate, and proof of address within the relevant consular district. The matrícula consular also facilitates access to various services, including banking (many banks accept the ID), obtaining an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) to pay federal income taxes, and obtaining a driver's license. According to the Mexican Embassy, "[a]s of August 2013, more than 371 counties, 356 financial institutions, and 1,036 police departments accepted matrícula consular cards as a valid proof of ID" (National Immigration Law Center, 2015).

Global Skill Partnerships (GSPs)

A bilateral Global Skill Partnership (GSP) is an instrument “designed to channel migration pressures into tangible, mutual benefits for both a country of migrant origin and a country of destination.... maximis[ing] the benefits of migration and shar[ing] them fairly.” GSPs are meant to be exchanges between equal partners, whereby the country of destination commits to providing finance and technology to train potential migrants with specific skills in the country of origin, prior to the migration journey. Under the GSP model, countries of origin commit to carrying out training for potential departing migrants, but also receive support from countries of destination for training non-migrants as well (Clemens and Gough, 2018).

Bilateral labour agreements

Some countries have signed bilateral labour agreements that are based on international human rights norms and foundations. For example, the Colombia-Peru Framework Agreement of 2012 refers to the rights embedded in the international instruments ratified by both countries, which includes the International Convention on the Rights of Migrants Workers and the Members of their Families (ICRMW).

Colombia's Special Stay Permit

In 2017, Colombia created a Special Stay Permit enabling 180,000 Venezuelan migrants who had entered through formal border points to remain in the country. The national authorities also registered more than 442,000 irregular migrants. Venezuelans who have registered or acquired the Special Stay Permit are entitled to remain in Colombia for up to two years with access to basic rights, including employment, health and education (UNHCR, 2018).

COVID-19 residence status extension

In reaction to the COVID-19 pandemic, in March 2020 Portugal announced plans to grant residence status to everyone with pending residence applications on any ground, including but not limited to asylum, until 1 July 2020. Individuals granted permits on this basis were able to access health care and all other public services on equal terms as any other permanent resident in Portugal. Similarly, other countries, including Italy, France and Poland have automatically extended the validity of all residence permits expiring during the lock-down.

Bilateral labour agreements

Bilateral labour agreements between countries can also be effective at regulating recruitment practices. For example, the MOU between the Philippines and Japan clearly indicates the recruitment fees that employers must pay: as of 2013, USD 425 as a processing fee and a USD 25 contribution to the Worker's Welfare Fund.

International Recruitment Integrity System

The International Recruitment Integrity System (IRIS) is a global initiative aimed at promoting ethical and recruitment. IRIS defines and sets a benchmark for ethical recruitment, called the IRIS Standard, and establishes a voluntary certification scheme for ethical labour recruiters, as well as a compliance and monitoring mechanism. Through IRIS, IOM works with governments, the private sector and civil society to create ethical recruitment conditions that will eventually enable ethical recruitment to become the norm (IOM, n.d.).

Indonesia's DESBUMI local initiatives

Indonesia's Jember Regency, which covers a large number of rural towns and urbanised territories in the East Java Region, has various programmes aimed at supporting former migrants' social inclusion and access to employment in ethical conditions. These initiatives include artisanship activities and digital literacy programmes, which contribute not only to migrants' empowerment but also to local economic development. The work led at the local level has also been combined with a national strategy oriented towards the protection of migrants' rights in international human rights law (Mampu.bappenas.go.id, n.d.).

Principles and Guidelines, migrants in vulnerable situations

United Nations entities have developed principles and guidelines on the human rights protection of migrants in vulnerable situations. Published by the Global Migration Group (GMG) Working Group on Human Rights and Gender, and led by OHCHR, the document provides guidance to States (and other stakeholders as relevant) on how to operationalize the international human rights law framework and related standards for the protection of migrants who are in vulnerable situations, either because of the situations they left behind, the circumstances in which they travel or the conditions they face on arrival, or because of personal characteristics such as their age, gender identity, disability or health status (OHCHR, n.d. a).

Morocco's regularization campaigns

Morocco initiated two regularization campaigns beginning in 2014 with the aim of providing secure legal status to undocumented migrants on their territory. This included women, men and children regardless of the initial reasons for entry who had lived in Morocco for at least five years.

Minimum Standards for the Protection of Refugees and Migrants Living in Refugee Centres

In 2016 UNICEF and the German Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth launched a national, multi-partner initiative to strengthen existing child protection systems. One major achievement of the initiative was Minimum Standards for the Protection of Refugees and Migrants Living in Refugee Centres, developed in a participatory process that involved over 30 partners. UNICEF produced training materials and tools to ensure the effective implementation and monitoring of the standards by service providers. Over 2,500 refugee centre managers, protection coordinators and staff were trained in the 100 refugee centres across Germany (BMFSFJ and UNICEF, 2017).

Children on the Move in Egypt

In 2019, the national Children on the Move Taskforce in Egypt developed National SOPs on the protection and assistance of child asylum-seekers, refugees, smuggled migrants and victims of trafficking in persons and a child helpline for children on the move.

Save Lives and Establish Coordinated International Efforts on Missing Migrants

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Develop procedures and agreements on search and rescue of migrants, with the primary objective to protect migrants' right to life that uphold the prohibition of collective expulsion, guarantee due process and individual assessments, enhance reception and assistance capacities, and ensure that the provision of assistance of an exclusively humanitarian nature for migrants is not considered unlawful
- b. Review the impacts of migration-related policies and laws to ensure that these do not raise or create the risk of migrants going missing, including by identifying dangerous transit routes used by migrants, by working with other States as well as relevant stakeholders and international organizations to identify contextual risks and establishing mechanisms for preventing and responding to such situations, with particular attention to migrant children, especially those unaccompanied or separated
- c. Enable migrants to communicate with their families without delay to inform them that they are alive by facilitating access to means of communication along routes and at their destination, including in places of detention, as well as access to consular missions, local authorities and organizations that can provide assistance with family contacts, especially in cases of unaccompanied or separated migrant children, as well as adolescents
- d. Establish transnational coordination channels, including through consular cooperation, and designate contact points for families looking for missing migrants, through which families can be kept informed on the status of the search and obtain other relevant information, while respecting the right to privacy and protecting personal data
- e. Collect, centralize and systematize data regarding corpses and ensure traceability after burial, in accordance with internationally accepted forensic standards, and establish coordination channels at transnational level to facilitate identification and the provision of information to families
- f. Make all efforts, including through international cooperation, to recover, identify and repatriate the remains of deceased migrants to their countries of origin, respecting the wishes of grieving families, and, in the case of unidentified individuals, facilitate the identification and subsequent recovery of the mortal remains, ensuring that the remains of deceased migrants are treated in a dignified, respectful and proper manner

Proyecto Frontera (Border Project)

In 2009, the Argentine Forensic Anthropology Team (EAAF), working with committees of families of missing migrants, NGOs and governmental institutions from the countries that sit along the migrant corridor connecting Central America, Mexico and the USA, launched the Proyecto Frontera (Border Project) in an effort to identify migrants who have gone missing in Central America, Mexico or at the border between Mexico and the USA. The main objective of this project is to help set up a regional mechanism to improve the exchange of information on missing migrants and unidentified remains along this corridor. Data on missing migrants are collected, verified and catalogued so that they can be cross-referenced with forensic data on unidentified remains recovered by forensic institutions in both transit and destination countries. This led to the creation of forensic databases in Central America and Mexico, with the participation of the respective ministries of foreign affairs, civil society organizations, forensic institutions and committees of families of missing migrants (ICRC, 2020).

Identifying missing migrants in Italy

In 2007, the Government of Italy established an office dedicated to dealing with missing persons within its Ministry of Interior. The main tasks of the Special Commissioner for Missing Persons include coordinating between different State actors, supervising the activities of other actors and institutions, managing and updating the national register of unidentified bodies, facilitating the cross-checking of information on unidentified bodies and missing persons, and liaising with international institutions, NGO representatives, and the families of the disappeared. The Office of the Special Commissioner has handled various significant shipwrecks. In the context of these tragedies, the Commissioner's office lay out guidelines on how to manage situations of migration-related shipwrecks (IOM, 2019).

International Committee of the Red Cross

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) has established an approach to tracing the families of missing migrants through using an algorithmic method and contextual ante-mortem data. The ICRC combines this method of using ante-mortem data with traditional tracing methods, and its approach is being piloted in Mauritania and Senegal (Robins, 2018).

Counter-Smuggling Work Plan 2019-2025

The Member Countries of the Regional Conference on Migration (RCM) developed a Counter-Smuggling Work Plan 2019-2025, which aims to be a key instrument for enhancing States' regional cooperation around preventing and combating migrant smuggling. The non-binding Work Plan lays out specific actions that States can take in four areas of cooperation: (1) investigation; (2) cooperation on judicial responses; (3) administrative detention and alternatives; and (4) migration solutions, prevention and assistance for migrant victims of related crimes. The Work Plan was designed for government actors, international organizations and civil society organizations working to combat the smuggling of persons and to protect smuggled migrants in vulnerable situations (RCM, 2018).

Global Action against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants - Asia and the Middle East

The Global Action against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants - Asia and the Middle East (GLO.ACT Asia and the Middle East) is a four-year (2018-2022), €12 million joint initiative by the European Union and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) implemented in partnership with IOM in four countries: Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, Islamic Republic of Iran, Republic of Iraq and Islamic Republic of Pakistan. GLO.ACT assists governmental authorities and civil society organizations in targeted, innovative and demand-driven interventions: sustaining effective strategy and policy development, legislative review and harmonization, capability development, and regional and trans-regional cooperation. The project also provides direct assistance to victims of human trafficking and migrants in vulnerable situations through the strengthening of identification, referral and protection mechanisms (UNODC, n.d.).

Ibero-American network of specialized prosecutors on trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants (REDTRAM)

In September 2018, the UNODC offices in Brazil and Colombia - in cooperation with the Ibero-American Association of Public Ministries (AIAMP) - held the fourth meeting of the Ibero-American network of specialized prosecutors on trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants (REDTRAM), which resulted in various concrete outcomes aimed at increasing regional cooperation. For example, the network decided to set up joint investigation teams to handle specific cases of trafficking and smuggling in the region. It also decided to establish a technical secretariat for REDTRAM within Argentina's Public Ministry as a way to promote improved communication and to process members' requests for cooperation (UNODC, 2018).

State of California Assembly Bill No. 629 (AB-629)

In late 2019, the Governor of the State of California (USA) signed a ground-breaking bill into law that aimed to equip survivors of human trafficking with the necessary resources to rebuild their lives. Assembly Bill No. 629 allows trafficking survivors to receive compensation for income loss and commercial exploitation from California's Crime Victim Compensation Fund (VCP). This fund provides reimbursements for crime-related expenses to victims who have suffered physical injury (or the threat thereof) due to violent crime. Previous regulations did not allow trafficking victims to receive compensation from the fund (Coalition to Abolish Slavery & Trafficking, 2019).

PROTECT project

The "Persons at risk of trafficking in Europe - capacity to identify and assist potential victims of human trafficking" (PROTECT) project was a two-year cross-border initiative (2014-2016). Bringing together the Croatian Red Cross, British Red Cross, International Centre for Policy Migration (ICMPD) and the Republic of Croatia Government Office of Human Rights and National Minorities as project partners, the project was co-funded by the Prevention of and Fight against Crime Programme of the European Union (ISEC). The project had the following aims:

- Equip caseworkers and practitioners on the front lines with the skills needed to recognize signs of trafficking and to provide adequate and tailored support.
- Improve the systematic collection and compiling of data on trends and information regarding groups vulnerable to human trafficking.
- Allow for the exchange of best practices and information between European Union Member States on the prevention of trafficking and assistance to victims (Red Cross EU Office, 2020).

Brazil's labour inspectorate

The labour inspectorate in Brazil has been held up as an example in tackling labour exploitation. Guidelines for inter-institutional use, prepared by the National Commission for the Eradication of Slave Labour (CONATRAE), indicate practices to be implemented by all authorities. The guidelines outline, for example: the application of all the relevant labour and social security legislation for both regular and irregular migrant workers; that confidentiality regarding the identity of complainants should be fully guaranteed; that steps should be taken to regularize the situation and ensure severance pay and unemployment allowance for all affected workers; that the relevant authorities should cooperate to ensure that workers are provided with a permit when possible, including permanent residence status for victims of human trafficking regardless of the outcome of criminal proceeding, permits for nationals of MERCOSUR countries, Bolivia, Chile, Peru and Ecuador who have not committed a crime, and permits on grounds of family reunion, work, temporary amnesty for undocumented migrants, or humanitarian reasons, as per the corresponding regulations (PICUM, 2020a).

West African Network for the Protection of Children

The West African Network for the Protection of Children (WAN) of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) allows for the coordination between national child protection systems in ECOWAS states. WAN's specific interventions include identifying children in vulnerable situations, carrying out family tracing and conducting a social evaluation. If return must be facilitated by WAN, it is done using an agreed-upon case management tool. In 2011, WAN was strengthened following the launch of the ECOWAS Support Procedures and Standards for the Protection and Reintegration of Vulnerable Children on the Move and Young Migrants. These procedures and standards lay out eight key areas of protection for uprooted children. Some of the areas outlined were identification, alternative care, emergency support and family assessment (UNICEF, 2017).

Training public officials on migration and trafficking in persons

Azerbaijan and Bosnia and Herzegovina have undertaken various initiatives for training public officials on migration and trafficking in persons, including on the application of the provisions of the international human rights framework (OHCHR, 2018).

African Union Border Programme

In June 2007, the African Union Border Programme (AUBP) promoting regional cross-border cooperation on border management was adopted by the 1st Conference on African Ministers in Charge of Border Issues. The objectives of AUBP are to finalize the demarcation and delimitation of African borders, to facilitate and encourage cross-border cooperation through joint planning and developing shared cross-border areas, and to increase Member States' border management capacity. Subsequent conferences led to the adoption of additional border management-related mechanisms. For example, the 3rd Ministerial Conference, held in May 2012, resulted in the African Union Convention on Cross-Border Cooperation, which was adopted in June 2014 at the 23rd Ordinary Session of the Assembly of the African Union (African Union Commission, n.d.).

United States Government's Human Trafficking Task Force e-Guide

The US government's Training and Technical Assistance Center, within its Office for Victims of Crime (OVCTTAC), practices trauma-informed victim interviewing when engaging with victims of human trafficking. OVCTTAC provides guidance on how to conduct trauma-informed interviewing, in particular providing information on what to expect when interviewing trafficking victims. For example, the guidelines say that interviewers should not be surprised if a victim denies they are a victim, has fears around safety and privacy, and has unmet medical needs, including nutrition or lack of sleep. Furthermore, the guidelines highlight the effects of trauma on the behaviour of trafficking victims, for example, lack of focus, memory loss and emotional reactivity, and emphasize that "[a]ny approach to the victim should be a gradual and nonthreatening process" (OVCTTAC, n.d.).

The best interests principle

In line with Article 3.1 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child ("In all actions concerning children... the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration"), some States have taken into account the best interests of the child in their investigation and interviewing processes, including psychological distress of unaccompanied children during interviews and investigations. For example:

- In the Netherlands, Norway and the United Kingdom, screening interviews are scheduled with unaccompanied children, which gives the children a recovery period before they have to go through the rest of the immigration or asylum system.

- In Norway, when unaccompanied or separated children are initially registered by immigration police, both a guardian and a case manager are present throughout the registration process.
- The UK Home Office has a statutory guidance entitled “Every Child Matters”. A Home Office pro-forma facilitates the exchange of information between the Home Office and the local authority charged with caring for the child, which helps assess and determine the child’s best interests (UNICEF, 2014).

Zambia’s National Referral Mechanism

In 2019, the migration governance indicator (MGI) assessment in Zambia identified the national referral mechanism (NRM) among areas that could benefit from further development. To improve migrant protection, well-being and mitigate vulnerabilities, the country revised the NRM in 2020. This NRM provides guidance on the different stages and types of assistance available to vulnerable migrants requiring protection assistance. It promotes coordination of national stakeholders for the provision of effective and comprehensive protection assistance to selected categories of vulnerable migrants in line with national legal frameworks and international best practices (Government of Zambia, 2020).

Kazakhstan’s training programme

In 2019, UNICEF collaborated with the National Academy of Public Administration (APA) in Kazakhstan to develop a training programme for civil servants, immigration officers and social workers on (1) international standards and best interests assessment; (2) immigration procedures, alternatives to detention, family tracing and reunification; and (3) case management for the protection of children in migration processes, including access to education and health.

Use Migration Detention Only as a Measure of Last Resort and Work Towards Alternatives

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Use existing relevant human rights mechanisms to improve independent monitoring of migrant detention, ensuring that it is a measure of last resort, that human rights violations do not occur, and that States promote, implement and expand alternatives to detention, favouring non-custodial measures and community-based care arrangements, especially in the case of families and children
- b. Consolidate a comprehensive repository to disseminate best practices of human rights based alternatives to detention in the context of international migration, including by facilitating regular exchanges and the development of initiatives based on successful practices among States, and between States and relevant stakeholders
- c. Review and revise relevant legislation, policies and practices related to immigration detention to ensure that migrants are not detained arbitrarily, that decisions to detain are based on law, are proportionate, have a legitimate purpose, and are taken on an individual basis, in full compliance with due process and procedural safeguards, and that immigration detention is not promoted as a deterrent or used as a form of cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment to migrants, in accordance with international human rights law
- d. Provide access to justice for all migrants in countries of transit and destination that are or may be subject to detention, including by facilitating access to free or affordable legal advice and assistance of a qualified and independent lawyer, as well as access to information and the right to regular review of a detention order
- e. Ensure that all migrants in detention are informed about the reasons for their detention, in a language they understand, and facilitate the exercise of their rights, including to communicate with the respective consular or diplomatic missions without delay, legal representatives and family members, in accordance with international law and due process guarantees
- f. Reduce the negative and potentially lasting effects of detention on migrants by guaranteeing due process and proportionality, that it is for the shortest period of time, safeguards physical and mental integrity, and that, as a minimum, access to food, basic healthcare, legal orientation and assistance, information and communication, as well as adequate accommodation is granted, in accordance with international human rights law
- g. Ensure that all governmental authorities and private actors duly charged with administering immigration detention do so in a way consistent with human rights and are trained on non-discrimination, the prevention of arbitrary arrest and detention in the context of international migration, and are held accountable for violations or abuses of human rights
- h. Protect and respect the rights and best interests of the child at all times, regardless of their migration status, by ensuring availability and accessibility of a viable range of alternatives to detention in non-custodial contexts, favouring community-based care arrangements, that ensure access to education and healthcare, and respect their right to family life and family unity, and by working to end the practice of child detention in the context of international migration

○ Hong Kong's program to house vulnerable individuals in the community

In Hong Kong, screening and assessment of migrants' situations ensure detention is used as a last resort only. During this assessment process, they take into account numerous factors, including whether the person concerned constitutes a security risk or threat to the community, whether they may abscond or re-offend, whether their identity has been resolved, and whether they have a fixed domicile (or a close connection) in Hong Kong. After being detained for a short time, most vulnerable individuals, among them torture claimants and asylum seekers, are released and issued with recognizance papers indicating their status. To help support these individuals, a project funded by the government and operated by an NGO provides clothing, medicine and food, and arranges for the vulnerable individuals to be housed in the community (International Detention Coalition, 2015).

○ Cross-Regional Peer Learning Platform on Alternatives to Child Immigration Detention

International Detention Coalition (IDC) has partnered with UNICEF to convene a global multi-stakeholder initiative aimed at supporting States in addressing the practical challenges they face when implementing alternatives to child immigration detention. The Cross-Regional Peer Learning Platform on Alternatives to Child Immigration Detention provides an umbrella for government experts to come together and engage in peer exchange, with technical support from a wide range of stakeholders. Since 2018, regional peer learning events co-hosted by Member States, IDC and UNICEF have taken place in Ecuador, Namibia, Tunisia and Thailand (UN Network on Migration, 2021).

○ Thailand's inter-ministerial framework to apply alternatives for children in immigration detention

The Government of Thailand set out an inter-ministerial framework to apply alternatives for children in immigration detention, in partnership with civil society and UNICEF, establishing a practical link between migration and child protection law (Government of Thailand, 2019).

○ Release from immigration detention during COVID-19

Since the outbreak of COVID-19, hundreds of individuals have been released from immigration detention. In Spain, almost all immigration detainees have been released and provided accommodation in state-funded reception programmes run by NGOs (PICUM, 2020b). Hundreds of individuals have also been released in the UK, Belgium, Netherlands and Italy. Most of the releases have been ordered by judges based on a case-by-case analysis of individuals' circumstances, both because of the difficulties in implementing social distancing measures in detention centres and because European Union law prohibits the detention of individuals if there is no reasonable prospect of return.

Enhance Consular Protection, Assistance and Cooperation Throughout the Migration Cycle

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Cooperate to build consular capacities, train consular officers, promote arrangements for providing consular services collectively where individual States lack capacity, including through technical assistance, and to develop bilateral or regional agreements on various aspects of consular cooperation
- b. Involve relevant consular and immigration personnel in existing global and regional fora on migration in order to exchange information and best practices about issues of mutual concern that pertain to citizens abroad and contribute to comprehensive and evidence-based migration policy development
- c. Conclude bilateral or regional agreements on consular assistance and representation in places where States have an interest in strengthening effective consular services related to migration, but do not have a diplomatic or consular presence
- d. Strengthen consular capacities in order to identify, protect and assist our nationals abroad who are in a situation of vulnerability, including victims of human and labour rights violations or abuse, victims of crime, victims of trafficking in persons, migrants subject to smuggling under aggravating circumstances, and migrant workers exploited in the process of recruitment, by providing training to consular officers on human rights-based, gender-responsive and child-sensitive actions in this regard
- e. Provide our nationals abroad the opportunity to register with the country of origin, in close cooperation with consular, national and local authorities, as well as relevant migrant organizations, as a means to facilitate information, services and assistance to migrants in emergency situations and ensure migrants' accessibility to relevant and timely information, such as by establishing help-lines and consolidating national digital databases, while upholding the right to privacy and protecting personal data
- f. Provide consular support to our nationals through advice, including on local laws and customs, interaction with authorities, financial inclusion, and business establishment, as well as through the issuance of relevant documentation, such as travel documents, and consular identity documents that may facilitate access to services, assistance in emergency situations, the opening of a bank account, and access to remittance facilities

This protocol was developed by Mexico with the assistance of IOM and the United States Embassy in Mexico. It is designed to facilitate the capacity of Mexico's consular network to identify victims and possible victims of trafficking abroad. It also lays out criteria, guidelines and specific actions for providing assistance and protection. Mexico developed two other consular protection protocols with the help of United Nations agencies: one on unaccompanied migrant children and adolescents (in partnership with UNICEF) and another on victims of gender-based violence (in partnership with UN Women) (Government of Mexico, 2018).

Model of consular protection of migrant girls, boys and adolescents

In addition, in both Guatemala and Mexico, UNICEF programmes are working to strengthen consular protection for migrant and refugee children - including those who are apprehended or detained in transit. These programmes have helped develop child-sensitive interview techniques for consular officials to detect children's protection needs, give them information about their rights and options, and provide psychosocial support (UNICEF Mexico, 2015). The government of Guatemala, with UNICEF support, has developed a protocol for consular support to migrant children.

Philippines' coordination of assistance to nationals (OUMWA)

The Department of Foreign Affairs' Office of the Undersecretary for Migrant Workers' Affairs (OUMWA) in the Philippines coordinates all assistance to nationals (ATN), along with legal services, for overseas Filipino workers in distress and their family members. OUMWA was created by the Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipinos Act of 1995, and it is provided through Philippines embassies and consulates. OUMWA collaborates with other government agencies to maximize and facilitate services for overseas workers in distress. These agencies include the Department of Labour and Employment, the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration, the Philippines Overseas Employment Administration, and civil society organizations (OUMWA, 2013). In September 2019, the Department of Foreign Affairs also launched an official "OFW Help" page on Facebook, which gives distressed overseas workers and their families a new means of reaching the government and requesting emergency assistance (Rocamora, 2019).

Tunisia's expansion of social assistance programmes

The municipality of Sfax in Tunisia has expanded its social assistance programmes for migrant residents in the context of COVID-19 (UCLG Committee, 2020). Actions led by the municipality have benefited from the crucial support of civil society groups and human rights defenders, as well as the support of IOM. The programmes have allowed Sfax to reach more than 1200 migrants in the context of the emergency. The Mayor of Sfax has also advocated for universal access to public health services so that migrants can use local hospitals.

Providing access to primary and secondary healthcare

Several countries offer access to a wide complement of primary and secondary healthcare to undocumented migrants (PICUM, 2016; PICUM, 2017; Chauvin, 2009; Smith, 2018). Thailand's Universal Healthcare Coverage Scheme, introduced in 2001 and extended in 2005, covers migrants as well as their spouses and children, regardless of their legal status (UN Women, 2021). In Belgium, undocumented migrants can access healthcare free of charge through Urgent Medical Assistance, which covers a broad range of preventive, primary and secondary care, including all medical care covered by the basic national insurance systems. As of 2015, health care expenses are directly reimbursed by the federal authorities.

Peru's Ministry of Social Development

Peru's Ministry of Social Development is implementing a specific strategy to provide cash transfers and reach at least 63,000 migrants in situations of extreme vulnerability. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has officially requested United Nations support to implement this initiative. The first phase of the program will target 350 families in the Lima North district (Government of Peru, n.d.).

Local governments

Local governments play a major role in supporting the inclusion process at the first stage of migrants' arrival, for example:

- The Migration Department of the City of Sao Paulo provides language courses to migrants with a view to helping them navigate municipal services and their social inclusion process (City of Sao Paulo, n.d.).
- The City of Gwangju, South Korea has focused on fostering migrants' empowerment and participation in the host society from a human rights-based point of view. It has addressed structural barriers within the administration and established concrete mechanisms for denouncing human rights violations in this context, thanks to its various local ombudsman and a local human rights committee. The city also has an international centre that offers language courses and opportunities for socializing (Kim, 2019).
- In the United Kingdom, local authorities facilitate immediate access to a 15 hours/week education programme (including English, Math, Science, Music, Art, Physical Education, and Personal, Social, Health and Economic education) to unaccompanied children. The programme has been shown to foster interaction and relationship building with host community students (UNICEF UK, 2018).

- There are many other examples of national and local governments around the world who are promoting the inclusion of migrant and displaced children in their communities (UNICEF, 2018; 2019).

Colombia's income generation strategy for migrants

The Colombian government, with the support of UNDP, designed and implemented an income generation strategy for migrants from Venezuela and host communities. The strategy aims in particular to facilitate migrants' access to labour markets while encouraging investments in training and education programmes to increase migrants' employment opportunities and reduce skills mismatches. It also seeks to promote entrepreneurship among migrants and host communities, strengthen the financial inclusion of the Venezuelan population and overcome specific obstacles faced by both migrant women and indigenous and Afro-descendant communities.

EXAMPLE PRACTICESFor more practices, visit the Migration Network Hub's Repository of Practices*Reducing ethnic profiling

To reduce ethnic profiling by the police, States can implement various good practices. For example, they can ensure that codes of conduct:

- Lay out clear non-discrimination values and standards;
- Are distributed to all law enforcement officers, and that training on the codes is provided in basic training as well as during ongoing active-service training; and
- Are enforced by managers and supervisors in law enforcement, whose actions (and non-actions) communicate a strong message about organizational values and external oversight (Open Society Foundations, 2012).

International Migrants Day

In 2004, 18 December was named International Migrants Day by the UN General Assembly. International Migrants Day is an annual opportunity to debunk false and harmful myths about migrants, to reiterate the need for international cooperation around facilitating safe, orderly and regular migration, and to remind the public of the sustainable development benefits that migration can bring to both communities of origin and destination and the need to promote and protect the rights of all migrants. Various States have used International Migrants Day as a way to promote positive perceptions of migrants, for example:

- In 2019, the Fourth Global Migration Film Festival - supported by the Embassy of Mexico, the Embassy of Switzerland, the Embassy of Canada and Save the Children
- As part of a global call to Stand Up for Human Rights, OHCHR launched a series of animated videos, "Storytelling on Migration", to amplify the voices of migrants, the communities that welcome them and the conversations they have along the way (OHCHR, n.d. b).
- ILO hosts an annual Global Media Competition on Labour Migration and Fair Recruitment to recognize exemplary media coverage on labour migration and fair recruitment (ILO, 2020).

Positive migration messages

In countries around the world, various measures have been taken to refute negative perceptions of migrants and to combat discrimination against migrants. In Costa Rica, the radio Programme "People without Borders" was broadcast for nine years and engaged its listeners in honest discussions about migration and citizenships issues, while giving them accurate information about migration. In Austria, the Austrian Red Cross created the "Stammtisch APP" to facilitate discussion and undermine misinformation that promoted racism against migrants (UNODC, 2015). To address the discrimination and violence that forcibly returned migrants are facing in communities of origin due to the fear of COVID-19 infection, UNICEF Guatemala (C4D Guatemala) has developed radio spots to dispel myths and common fears and promote social inclusion, for example: Addressing stigma, Returning migrants and COVID-19, and IGM video on how to approach and communicate about returns in the context of COVID-19.

Coalición LAC network

Four local authorities in the Latin American region (Quito, Mexico City, Medellín and Montevideo) have analyzed the structural dynamics of racism and discrimination against vulnerable groups in their city, with a particular emphasis on migrant groups (Jácome, 2019). Held in the context of the Coalición LAC network, this process has allowed the four cities to adopt local plans for social inclusion, which offer analysis of discrimination in the cities and seek to introduce changes in local administration, including new anti-racism policies.

● Europass portal

One regional example of an approach to harmonizing skills recognition is the Europass portal. This EU initiative facilitates skills recognition through the provision of standardized documentation that records qualifications, skills and experience in Europe. The Europass portal is operated by the European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training in 27 distinct languages. The Europass approach includes a standardized curriculum vitae format and a Europass Skills Passport, which serves as an electronic portfolio of a person's qualifications and skills which any person can use regardless of nationality (noting that this does automatically provide harmonisation of qualifications obtained outside of Europe with European standards) (Braňka, 2016).

● Mutual recognition of skills in ASEAN

Since 2012, ILO has been assisting ASEAN States to implement mutual skills recognition in middle to low-skilled occupations. This support aims to help ASEAN prepare for its future as a region boasting the free flow of skilled labour. While ASEAN's existing mutual recognition agreements focus on eight categories of high-skilled occupations, ILO is supporting the region with expanding skills recognition to middle to low-skilled occupations. The ILO's engagement with ASEAN Member States since 2012 has mainly involved helping build capacity and institutional mechanisms. It will now move into the stage of piloting mutual skills recognition in a number of corridors: Thailand with Cambodia, Laos and Myanmar in masonry, bricklaying and plastering; Thailand with Cambodia in electrical wiring construction; and Thailand with Myanmar in the operation of sewing machines (ILO, 2019).

Several sub-Saharan African countries have established (or will establish) institutional mechanisms for diaspora outreach and engagement.

- Burundi, well aware of the role its diaspora can play in the fight against poverty, has established a diaspora department within its Ministry of External Affairs.
- The government of Nigeria has created the Nigerians in the Diaspora Organization (NIDO) and allocates office space at its embassy in Washington, D.C. for coordination. One of NIDO's objectives is to provide a platform for diaspora members to dialogue with the Nigerian government on efficient and practical ways to affect the Nigerian economy.
- In Zimbabwe, government is considering a comprehensive policy for migration management and diaspora engagement. To this end, an inter-ministerial team from Zimbabwe took a tour of the Philippines and India to learn lessons from these countries on how to create institutions for the coordination of diaspora-related issues (Fragile States Unit, n.d.).

Crowdfunding platforms: Moldova

The IOM office in Moldova, collaborating with Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA), identified how a crowdfunding platform could be best utilized to promote the efficient use of migrant funds. Recommendations include to use a hybrid crowdfunding model that begins by channelling diaspora contributions into community and development projects, and transitions into becoming a platform that attracts both financial investments and donations and to have the platform focus on certain areas, especially manufacturing, IT, and education (Columbia SIPA, n.d.). In addition, through the Integrated Migration and Local Development Project (MiDL), supported by UNDP and Switzerland, Moldova managed to ensure a two-way dialogue through organizing the diaspora/migrants and local development programmes where more than 10,000 migrants participated. The project emphasized the national ownership and strengthened capacities at national and local levels to enable a socioeconomic environment, secure employment support, reduce disparities and inequalities, provide income generating opportunities, and ensure sustainable local development. The project resulted in a national comprehensive strategic framework, the National Employment Strategy for 2017-2021 developed in cooperation with ILO, that steers and guides all national employment policy interventions, including on labour migration and reintegration. To date, more than 300,000 people benefit from better services in their villages and cities (UNDP Moldova, n.d.).

iDIASPORA, hosted by IOM, is an online platform that invites members of different diasporas to collaborate and connect across the world and across transnational communities. The platform aims to allow diaspora members to work together, learn from each other, and generative sustainable positive impacts in both countries of destination and origin. Using the platform, users can find and connect with members of the online community with whom they share common areas of work and interest (IOM, n.d.).

All SDGs

Migration can be a powerful driver of sustainable development for migrants and their communities in countries of origin, transit and destination. The extent to which migrants are able to contribute to sustainable development outcomes depends on migrants' rights being upheld, as well as their ability to access services and fully integrate as contributing members of their communities. Accordingly, all SDGs are relevant to the 2030 Agenda's promise to leave no one behind.

Promote Faster, Safer and Cheaper Transfer of Remittances and Foster Financial Inclusion of Migrants

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Develop a roadmap to reduce the transaction costs of migrant remittances to less than 3 per cent and eliminate remittance corridors with costs higher than 5 per cent by 2030 in line with target 10.c of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development
- b. Promote and support the United Nations International Day of Family Remittances and the IFAD Global Forum on Remittances, Investment and Development as an important platform to build and strengthen partnerships for innovative solutions on cheaper, faster and safer transfer of remittances with all relevant stakeholders
- c. Harmonize remittance market regulations and increase the interoperability of remittance infrastructure along corridors by ensuring that measures to combat illicit financial flows and money laundering do not impede migrant remittances through undue, excessive or discriminatory policies
- d. Establish conducive policy and regulatory frameworks that promote a competitive and innovative remittance market, remove unwarranted obstacles to non-bank remittance service providers in accessing payment system infrastructure, apply tax exemptions or incentives to remittance transfers, promote market access to diverse service providers, incentivize the private sector to expand remittance services, and enhance the security and predictability of low-value transactions by bearing in mind de-risking concerns, and developing a methodology to distinguish remittances from illicit flows, in consultation with remittance service providers and financial regulators
- e. Develop innovative technological solutions for remittance transfer, such as mobile payments, digital tools or e-banking, to reduce costs, improve speed, enhance security, increase transfer through regular channels and open up gender-responsive distribution channels to underserved populations, including for persons in rural areas, persons with low levels of literacy, and persons with disabilities
- f. Provide accessible information on remittance transfer costs by provider and channel, such as comparison websites, in order to increase the transparency and competition on the remittance transfer market, and promote financial literacy and inclusion of migrants and their families through education and training
- g. Develop programmes and instruments to promote investments from remittance senders in local development and entrepreneurship in countries of origin, such as through matching grant mechanisms, municipal bonds and partnerships with hometown associations, in order to enhance the transformative potential of remittances beyond the individual households of migrant workers at skills levels
- h. Enable migrant women to access financial literacy training and formal remittance transfer systems, as well as to open a bank account, own and manage financial assets, investments and business as means to address gender inequalities and foster their active participation in the economy
- i. Provide access to and develop banking solutions and financial instruments for migrants, including low-income and female-headed households, such as bank accounts that permit 29 direct deposits by employers, savings accounts, loans and credits in cooperation with the banking sector

○ Northwest Area Immigrant Asset-Building Initiative

The Northwest Area Immigrant Asset-Building Initiative aims to promote integration, citizenship and financial security for immigrant communities living in the Northwest region of the United States. Launched jointly by Inclusiv, a certified intermediary of the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund, and Grantmakers Concerned with Immigration and Refugees, the initiative embodies a deep understanding of the types of situations immigrants are more likely to find themselves in: lacking health insurance and access to essential services (including financial services), and more likely to live in poverty and have the cost of naturalization applications pose a financial barrier (Inclusiv, n.d.a). With this in mind, the initiative has awarded grants to two entities, OneAmerica and the Diversity Center of Iowa, both of which help their clients with citizenship applications and fees through providing financial and legal assistance ((Inclusiv, n.d. b)

Lowering remittance costs

Countries like Bangladesh and Sri Lanka have carried out various interventions to lower remittance costs at the national level.

- After Bangladesh banned exclusivity agreements, therefore promoting competitive market conditions, the costs of remittances went down.
- After Sri Lanka reformed its national payment system, it was able to bring down the cost of sending remittances from 10 per cent to 5 per cent (Cirasino, 2014).

Technological developments in mobile payments

In January 2020, Remitly, an online money transfer service based in the United States, joined forces with Alipay, making it possible for Remitly customers to transfer money from their computer or smartphone, and for money transfers to be subsequently received using the Alipay app (Hurst, 2020). Technological developments in the area of mobile payments have the potential to facilitate faster and cheaper remittances (Kunze, n.d.). After launching SendMoneyPacific (SMP) — a website for comparing money transfer costs — Australia and New Zealand saw their remittance costs decrease by 2.9 per cent and 2.1 per cent, respectively (Cirasino, 2014).

Cooperate in Facilitating Safe and Dignified Return and Readmission, As Well As Sustainable Reintegration

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Develop and implement bilateral, regional and multilateral cooperation frameworks and agreements, including readmission agreements, ensuring that return and readmission of migrants to their own country is safe, dignified and in full compliance with international human rights law, including the rights of the child, by determining clear and mutually agreed procedures that uphold procedural safeguards, guarantee individual assessments and legal certainty, and by ensuring they also include provisions that facilitate sustainable reintegration

Protecting the human rights of migrants in the context of return

States can refer to OHCHR's recommendations for ensuring human rights are respected in the context of return, including:

- Non-refoulement and the prohibition of arbitrary or collective expulsion;
- Due process and procedural safeguards;
- Sustainability of returns; and
- Return monitoring and accountability (including during post-return) (OHCHR, 2018).

Return and Reintegration Platform (IOM)

IOM's Return and Reintegration Platform aims to enhance capacity and know-how around facilitating safe and dignified return and readmission. On this platform, government actors can connect with other practitioners to share knowledge and good practices in the realm of return and reintegration. Funded by the European Union and created by the IOM in 2017, the platform offers a repertoire of reintegration initiatives that can be searched (initiatives can also be submitted), a community space to connect with peers and experts, e-courses and webinars, and a large repository of resources on the topic of return and reintegration.

Supporting migrant children on the move during COVID-19

IOM and UNICEF are working with the government of Ethiopia and its social service workforce to support thousands of migrant children - many unaccompanied - returning from eight countries during COVID-19. This includes registering returnees, identifying those who are in particularly vulnerable situations, ensuring returnees are referred to appropriate services based on identified needs, tracing families of unaccompanied children, ensuring children return safely to their homes, and supporting reintegration to the community. The two agencies are also supplying the returnees with dignity kits, soap, recreational kits, tents, beddings and other essential items (UNICEF, 2020b).

Honduras's educational bridges program

UNICEF and the Ministry of Education of Honduras have jointly developed a national educational bridges program that has successfully reintegrated over 2,000 out-of-school children into educational modalities, mainly internally displaced and returned migrant children and adolescents. The program includes not only academic levelling, but also counselling, psychosocial support, nutrition and basic social protection services. It is based on coordination across key sectors; In Honduras this implies involvement from the Ministry of Education, the national child protection authority, the Social Development Ministry, local governments and community organizations (UNICEF, 2019).

Cooperate in Facilitating Safe and Dignified Return and Readmission, As Well As Sustainable Reintegration

1.4: By 2030, ensure that all men and women, in particular the poor and the vulnerable, have equal rights to economic resources, as well as access to basic services, ownership and control over land and other forms of property, inheritance, natural resources, appropriate new technology and financial services, including microfinance

SDG 10: Reduced inequalities

10.7: Facilitate orderly, safe, regular and responsible migration and mobility of people, including through the implementation of planned and well-managed migration policies

SDG 16: Peace, justice and strong institutions

16.b: Promote and enforce non-discriminatory laws and policies for sustainable development

Establish Mechanisms for the Portability of Social Security Entitlements and Earned Benefits

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Establish or maintain non-discriminatory national social protection systems, including social protection floors for nationals and migrants, in line with the ILO Recommendation 202 on Social Protection Floors
- b. Conclude reciprocal bilateral, regional or multilateral social security agreements on the portability of earned benefits for migrant workers at all skills levels, which refer to applicable social protection floors in the respective States, applicable social security entitlements and provisions, such as pensions, healthcare or other earned benefits, or integrate such provisions into other relevant agreements, such as those on long-term and temporary labour migration
- c. Integrate provisions on the portability of entitlements and earned benefits into national social security frameworks, designate focal points in countries of origin, transit and destination that facilitate portability requests from migrants, address the difficulties women and older persons can face in accessing social protection, and establish dedicated instruments, such as migrant welfare funds in countries of origin that support migrant workers and their families

● Bilateral social security agreements

A World Bank-sponsored project studying four migration corridors between European Union and non-European Union countries (Austria-Turkey, Germany-Turkey, Belgium-Morocco, and France-Morocco) found that bilateral social security agreements (BSSAs) did not create any significant advantage or disadvantage that risked affecting labour mobility on a major scale. The project also highlighted the need for enhanced research around BSSAs in certain areas (such as fiscal fairness). The project also confirmed the idea that migration decisions are marginally impacted by the presence or absence of portability (Holzmann, 2018).

● Portable social security benefits for migrants

Portable social security benefits for migrants have great potential to alleviate poverty and contribute to development. The Caribbean Community (CARICOM) allows for the accumulation of social security contributions across CARICOM Member States. This allows migrant workers to meet state pension contribution thresholds (Hagen-Zanker, 2018).

● COVID-19 pandemic and social protection systems

There are parts of social protection systems that are inclusive of all regardless of status, or include measures specifically targeting migrants who are excluded from state welfare. Some of these measures have emerged to address the widespread loss of employment of people already in in-work poverty caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.

- Ireland's Pandemic Unemployment Payment: In Ireland, the Pandemic Unemployment Payment, a weekly cash payment of EUR 350 available for 12 weeks for people who have lost their employment due to COVID-19, includes undocumented workers. Undocumented workers can access information from social welfare services and apply for support free from the fear of their personal data being transferred for immigration purposes (Migrant Rights Centre Ireland, 2020).

- California's Disaster Relief Fund: A state-wide public-private partnership in California will provide a total of USD 125 million financial support to undocumented migrants impacted by COVID-19. California will provide USD 75 million to a Disaster Relief Fund to support undocumented Californians impacted by COVID-19 and ineligible for other financial supports due to immigration status. Approximately 150,000 undocumented adult Californians will receive a one-time cash payment of USD 500 per adult with a cap of USD 1,000 per household. It will be dispersed through non-profit organizations (see State of California Executive Order N-50-20). Philanthropic partners have committed to raising an additional USD 50 million in disaster relief assistance (Government of California, 2020).
- New York City's COVID-19 Immigrant Emergency Relief: Using a USD 20 million donation from Open Society Foundations, the New York City COVID-19 Immigrant Emergency Relief programme will create a citywide network of community-based organizations that will provide direct, one-time emergency relief payments to immigrant families, including undocumented workers (USD 400 per individual, usually with a cap of USD 1,000 per household). This initial funding will reach up to 20,000 undocumented workers and their families affected by COVID-19 related job loss and facing financial distress (City of New York, 2020).

RELEVANT SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

SDG 1: No poverty

1.3: Implement nationally appropriate social protection systems and measures for all, including floors, and by 2030 achieve substantial coverage of the poor and the vulnerable

SDG 3: Good health and well-being

3.8: Achieve universal health coverage, including financial risk protection, access to quality essential health-care services and access to safe, effective, quality and affordable essential medicines and vaccines for all

SDG 5: Gender equality

5.4: Recognize and value unpaid care and domestic work through the provision of public services, infrastructure and social protection policies and the promotion of shared responsibility within the household and the family as nationally appropriate

SDG 10: reduced inequalities

10.4: Adopt policies, especially fiscal, wage and social protection policies, and progressively achieve greater equality

10.7: Facilitate orderly, safe, regular and responsible migration and mobility of people, including through the implementation of planned and well-managed migration policies

SDG 17: Partnerships for the goals

17.18: By 2020, enhance capacity-building support to developing countries, including for least developed countries and small island developing States, to increase significantly the availability of high-quality, timely and reliable data disaggregated by income, gender, age, race, ethnicity, migratory status, disability, geographic location and other characteristics relevant in national context

Strengthen International Cooperation and Global Partnerships for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration

ASSOCIATED ACTIONS

- a. Support other States as we collectively implement the Global Compact, including through the provision of financial and technical assistance, in line with national priorities, policies action plans and strategies, through a whole-of-government and whole-of-society approach
- b. Increase international and regional cooperation to accelerate the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in geographic areas from where irregular migration systematically originates due to consistent impacts of poverty, unemployment, climate change and disasters, inequality, corruption, poor governance, among other structural factors, through appropriate cooperation frameworks, innovative partnerships and the involvement of all relevant stakeholders, while upholding national ownership and shared responsibility
- c. Involve and support local authorities in the identification of needs and opportunities for international cooperation for the effective implementation of the Global Compact and integrate their perspectives and priorities into development strategies, programmes and planning on migration, as a means to ensure good governance as well as policy coherence across levels of government and policy sectors, and maximize the effectiveness and impact of international development cooperation
- d. Make use of the capacity-building mechanism and build upon other existing instruments to strengthen the capacities of relevant authorities by mobilizing technical, financial and human resources from States international financial institutions, the private sector, international organizations and other sources in order to assist all States in fulfilling the commitments outlined in this Global Compact
- e. Conclude bilateral, regional or multilateral mutually beneficial, tailored and transparent partnerships, in line with international law, that develop targeted solutions to migration policy issues of common interest and address opportunities and challenges of migration in accordance with the Global Compact

● Ecuador's Call to Local Action on Migration

On 22 January 2020, more than 80 mayors gathering in Quito, Ecuador endorsed a Call to Local Action on Migration to accelerate new action around the GCM and the Global Compact on Refugees (GCR). The purpose of the mayors' meeting - which gathered mayors and government actors from 56 cities and regions from around the world - was to discuss the theme "From Large Movement to the Global Compacts: Cities as First Responders." This meeting took place at the Global Forum on Migration and Development (GFMD). One of the key takeaways from the forum was that international goals cannot be delivered if cities do not deliver, and while city governments and national governments may differ in their approaches, they can agree on common internationally agreed upon objectives, such as those in the GCM, GCR and SDGs (UCLG, Mayors Migration Council and IOM, 2020).

● Migration Multi-Partner Trust Fund

States can support other States in implementing the GCM by contributing to the Migration Multi-Partner Trust Fund (Migration MPTF), which is the start-up fund of the capacity building mechanism highlighted in the GCM. The MPTF is a United Nations financing mechanism that has been designed to support governments in implementing the GCM at the national level (UNDP, n.d.). Launched by UN Member States and United Nations entities in July 2019, the MPTF is now open for contributions (IOM, 2019).

Declaration on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Migrant Workers

In 2007, the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) adopted the Declaration on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Migrant Workers, thereby committing to promoting humane, dignified, decent and remunerative employment for migrant workers. The ASEAN declaration outlines the contributions that migrant workers make to the societies and economies of countries of origin and destination, and calls on countries of origin and destination to promote the dignity and potential of migrant workers, and to cooperate with each other to find solutions when migrant workers become undocumented through no fault of their own. Importantly, the declaration proposes the development of an ASEAN instrument on the protection and promotion of migrant workers' rights (ILO, 2018).

Initiative for Child Rights in the Global Compacts

The Initiative for Child Rights in the Global Compacts is a multi-stakeholder partnership that brings together over 30 civil society organizations, United Nations agencies, special procedures, philanthropy foundations, trade unions, and individual experts with the common aim to ensure that children's rights are at the very heart of the two global compacts on migration and refugees. It is co-chaired by Save the Children and Terre des Hommes (Children on the Move, 2020).

RELEVANT SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

Through enhanced partnerships within and among countries, regions and globally on migration governance, good migration governance can become an accelerator towards all 17 Sustainable Development Goals, depending on country context and migratory dynamics. In particular, the following SDG targets relating to partnerships are relevant:

SDG 17: Partnerships for the goals

17.3: Mobilize additional financial resources for developing countries from multiple sources

17.6: Enhance North-South, South-South and triangular regional and international cooperation on and access to science, technology and innovation and enhance knowledge sharing on mutually agreed terms, including through improved coordination among existing mechanisms, in particular at the United Nations level, and through a global technology facilitation mechanism

17.7: Promote the development, transfer, dissemination and diffusion of environmentally sound technologies to developing countries on favourable terms, including on concessional and preferential terms, as mutually agreed

17.14: Enhance policy coherence for sustainable development

17.16: Enhance the global partnership for sustainable development, complemented by multi-stakeholder partnerships that mobilize and share knowledge, expertise, technology and financial resources, to support the achievement of the sustainable development goals in all countries, in particular developing countries

17.17: Encourage and promote effective public, public-private and civil society partnerships, building on the experience and resourcing strategies of partnerships, data, monitoring and accountability

17.18: By 2020, enhance capacity-building support to developing countries, including for least developed countries and small island developing States, to increase significantly the availability of high-quality, timely and reliable data disaggregated by income, gender, age, race, ethnicity, migratory status, disability, geographic location and other characteristics relevant in national context

<https://migrationnetwork.un.org/migration-network-hub>

Following the adoption of the GCM, the United Nations Network on Migration established a capacity-building mechanism consisting of a connection hub interlinked with a knowledge platform - the Migration Network Hub - and a start-up fund (Migration Multi-Partner Trust Fund). The Hub is a virtual meeting space where governments, stakeholders and experts can access and share migration-related information and services. It provides curated content, analysis and information on a variety of topics. The Hub aims to support UN Member States in the implementation, follow-up and review of the Global Compact for Migration by serving as a repository of existing evidence, practices and initiatives, and facilitating access to knowledge sharing via online discussions, an expert database and tailor-made solutions.

United Nations Network on Migration

<http://migrationnetwork.un.org>

The United Nations system is committed to supporting the implementation, follow-up and review of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration. To this end, the United Nations establishes a Network on Migration to ensure effective, timely and coordinated system-wide support to Member States.

Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration

<https://migrationnetwork.un.org/global-compact-migration-follow-and-review>

The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) was adopted by United Nations Member States on 10 December 2018 and endorsed by the UN General Assembly on 19 December 2018. Prepared under the auspices of the United Nations, it is the first inter-governmentally negotiated agreement to cover all dimensions of international migration. In adopting the GCM, Member States committed to fulfilling its objectives and commitments at the national, regional and global levels in a way that takes into account different national realities, capacities and levels of development.
